CRATHES CASTLE

With its profusion of turrets and rising towers, set in some of the most beautiful gardens in Scotland, this enchanting 16th century castle is rich in atmosphere and romance. Crathes is set amid the tranquil beauty of Royal Deeside, that rich land of rivers, forests and gentle hills, has been the favoured home of aristocracy for a thousand years. Crathes Castle is one of the most impressive and beautiful castles that can be found on the famous castle trail. For over 350 years, Crathes was the home of the Burnetts, a family whose lineage includes generals, admirals, judges and even a Governor of New York. The family history also includes strange tales of mermaids and ghosts.

With such rich heritage, it's no surprise that Crathes feels every inch a place of romance and mystery. Rare in Scotland, Crathes appears today almost entirely as it did when first built in the 16th century, its glorious architecture reminiscent of the great French châteaux.

In the grounds of Crathes is one of the finest walled gardens of Scotland and is at its best during the summer months from May to September.

The tour includes a tour of the inside of the castle and the wonderful gardens.
